We call them 'endangered languages'. As the speakers of such languages grow old and die, their languages will die, too. All languages are really valuable, despite their differences. Every language is an amazing means of communication that meets the needs of its own speakers. It is impossible to imagine the world without language.			19

4	متن زیر را با دقت بخوانید و به سوالات آن پاسخ دهید. Endangered languages are those languages that are disappearing over time. Many people around the world speak these languages, but fewer young people learn them. This can happen because of many reasons, such as globalization and the influence of larger languages like English, Spanish, or Chinese. When fewer people use a language, it becomes harder to keep it alive. For example, some languages are only spoken by older generations. If young people do not learn these languages, they may fade away. This is sad because each language has its own unique culture and history. Losing a language means losing important knowledge about traditions and stories. On the other hand, new languages are also being created. For example, some people mix languages to communicate better. This can happen in communities where people from different countries live together. New words and expressions often come from these mixed languages. It is important to protect endangered languages while learning new ones. Both types of languages have value and importance in our global society. By respecting all languages, we can learn more about each other and celebrate our diverse cultures.			20
